REFERENCES:

Goodwin, M., Carlson, I. The peripherally inserted central catheter: A retrospective look at three years of insertions. Jour Intravenous Nursing 16(2)92, 1993.

Intravenous Nursing Society. Infusion nursing standards of practice. *Jour of James, L., Bledsoe, L., Hadaway, L. A retrospective look at tip location and complications of peripherally inserted central catheter lines. Jour Intravenous Nursing 16(2)104, 1993.

Kearns, P., Coleman, S., Wehner, J. Complications of long arm-catheters: a randomized trial of central vs peripheral tip location. Jour Parenteral and Enteral Nutrition 20(1)20, 1996.

LaFortune, S. The use of confirming x-rays to verify tip position of peripherally inserted catheters. Jour Intravenous Nursing 16(4)246, 1993

LaRue, G.D. Improving central placement rates of peripherally inserted catheters. Jour of Intravenous Nursing 18(1)24, 1995

Owings, J.T., Wolfe, B.M. Prevention of complications associated with semi-permanent silastic central venous catheters. In The 18th Clinical Congress:

Stanford Health Services Standardized Procedure for Insertion of Peripherally Inserted Central Catheters (PIC Catheters) and Extended Peripheral Catheters (Midline or Mid-arm Catheters), Draft format, February 1, 1996